Session Focus:

- Complex control architecture of grid-connected RES,
- Vortex Induced Vibration,
- Vortex Shedding,
- Mechanics of Mast Vibration in BWT,
- Aeroelastic Resonance,
- Pendulum based arrangement,
- BWT – 6 pulse arrangement.

Session 3

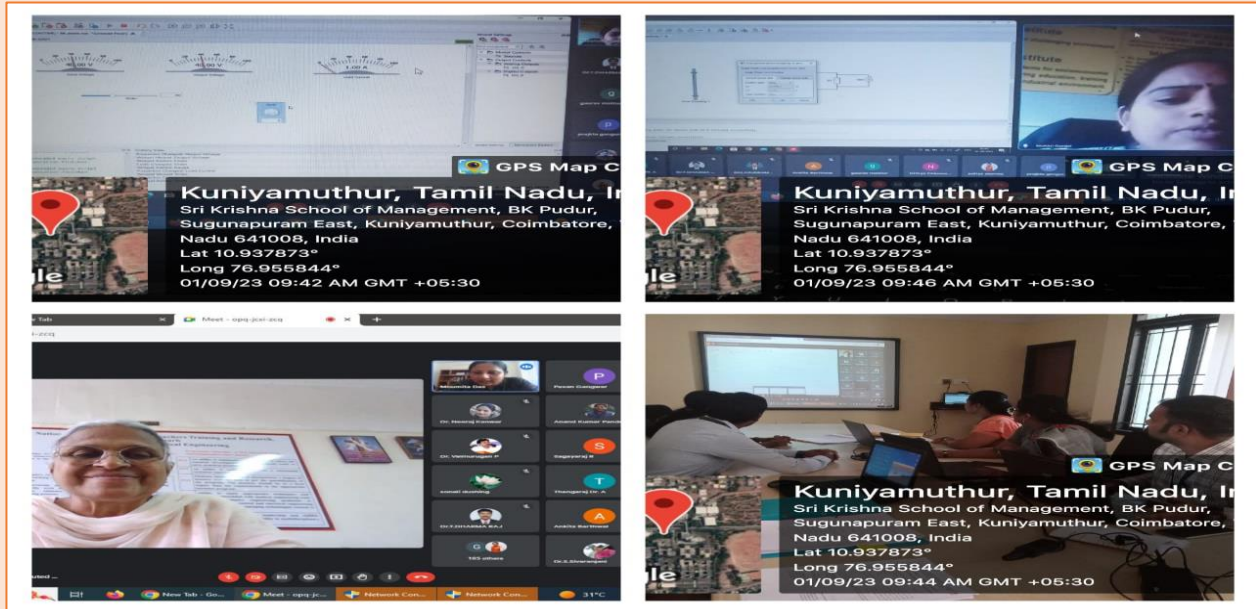

Resource Person: Dr.Moumita Das, Professor - EED, IIT, Mandi.

Topic: Power Electronic Traction for High-Speed Trains

Session Focus:

- Track Electrification,
- Single Catenary Construction,
- Compound Catenary Construction,
- System of Track Electrification,
- Self-Contained Vehicles,
- Magnetic Levitation for Ultra-High-speed Trains.

EEE | NITTTR SHORT TERM COURSE - DAY 5

SESSION 1

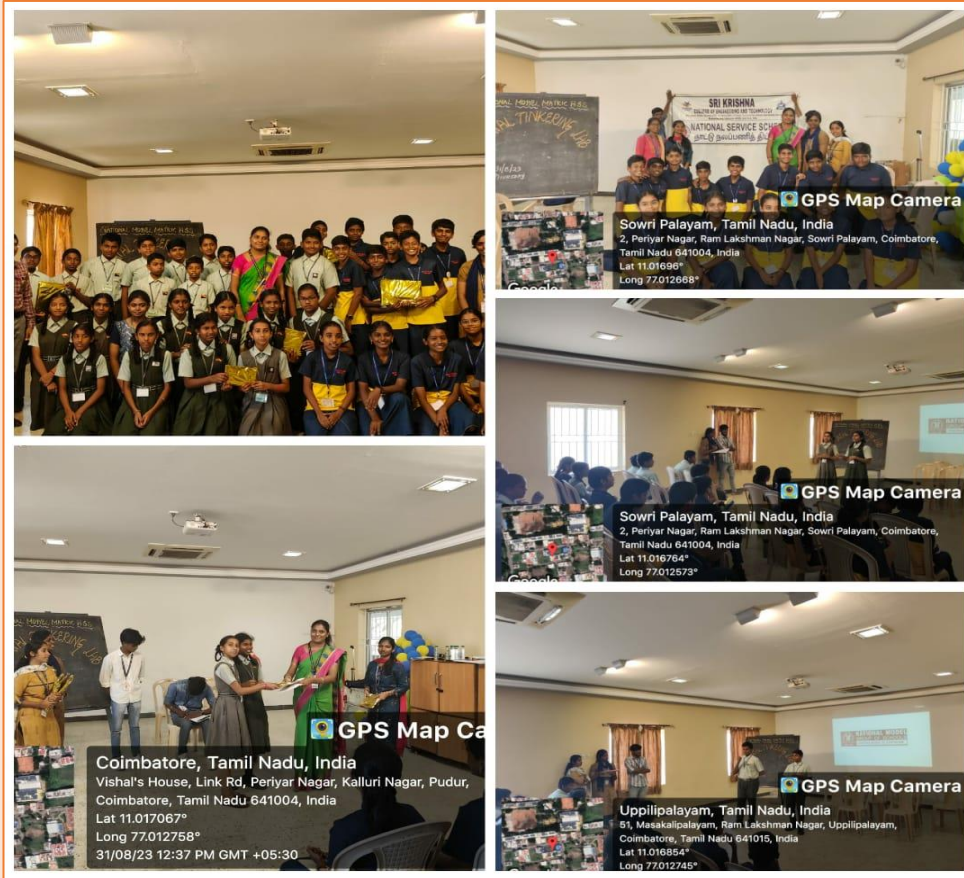

Resource Person: Er.Mohini Gunjal, Research Scholar, NITTTR, Chandigarh.

Topic: Real Time Simulation of various DG systems and Microgrid using Typhoon HIL

Session Focus:

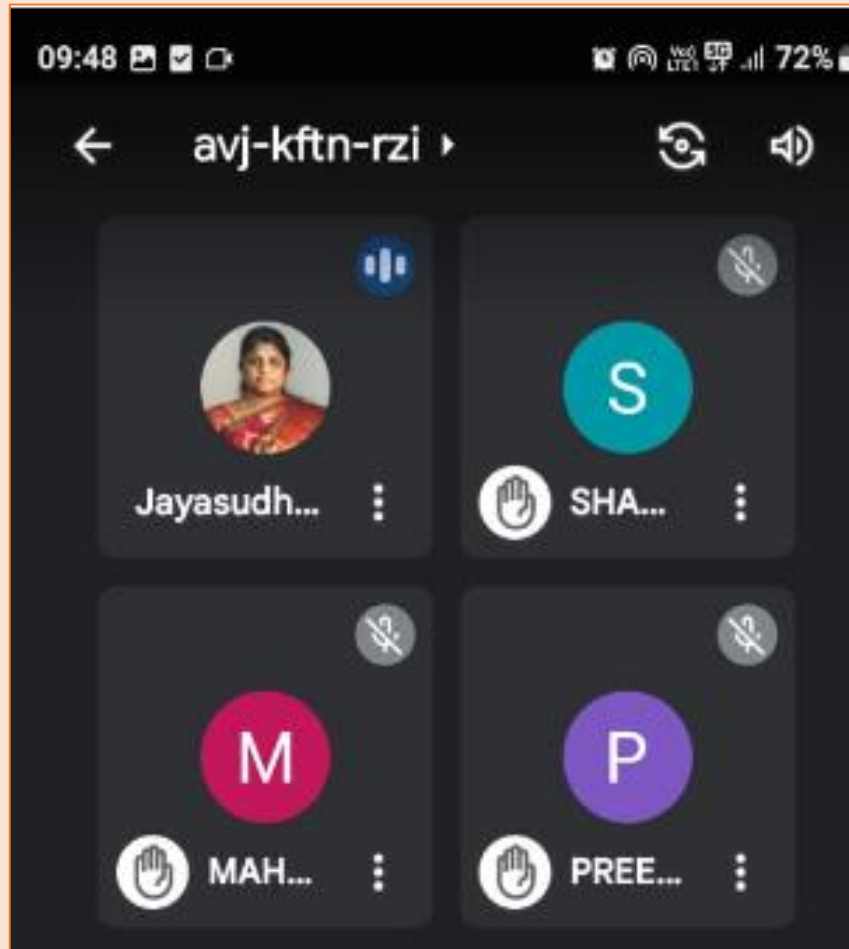

- Introduction to TYPHOON HIL Virtual Software
- HIL-simulation of Microgrid
- Performance analysis of HIL Microgrid System
- HIL-simulation of Electric Vehicles
- HIL Microgrid Testbed
- Interfacing TYPHOON HIL Virtual Software with prototype.

EEE | TESTIMONIAL BY PLACED STUDENTS

Firstly, I would like to extend my immense gratitude to Sri Krishna Family. I am incredibly grateful for the support provided by the management, EEE Department & the Placement Cell. Even during the highly competitive placement season, I managed to secure an offer only because of the timely guidance provided. All the placement preparation classes, placement tests, and mock interviews played a great role in performing well at the interviews. "From applicant to employee, the path is paved with hard work, perseverance, and a dash of courage that led to the ultimate reward". I can say that SKCET has been the best part of my life and the commitment of my department in helping students identify their strengths, improve their weaknesses, and navigate the recruitment process is truly commendable. We were well-trained for placements and because of the training, I got placed at Caterpillar. I genuinely owe my success to the placement for their unwavering assistance.

The health monitoring device display all three measured parameters namely blood pressure, heart rhythms and ECG together. The system analyze if there are any abnormalities in blood pressure, heart rhythms and ECG to the patient, doctor and caretaker with the alert message through wireless communication. The system also involves the location detecting technology using GPS and informs the patients about their health status at particular location for the convenience of the hospital or caretaker in an emergency. The will enable to connect for ambulance service to reach the spot. Smart health system is connected to the hospital database that maintains patient health history to recommend a healthy lifestyle. Chapter 3 EPSMS-ORR: Ensure Privacy and Security of Message Dissemination Scheme Using Symmetric Key and Overhead Reduced Routing in VANET

S. Karthikeyini, M. Rupa, S. Athira, and M. Ravikumar

1 Introduction

VANETs focus on enhancing driving comfort and road safety. Roadside units (RSUs), cars, and a centrally trusted authority are the three main components of VANETs [1]. Each vehicle has an on-board unit, which enables it to collect data from its surroundings, process it, and transfer it to other vehicles and/or RSUs via wireless communication. Dedicated Communication Short Range (DSRC). Therefore, automobiles may transmit and receive alarm signals via Vehicle-to-Vehicle (V2V) communication [2]. Consider the Emergency Electronic Brake Lights (EEBL) used in current vehicles. This system is designed to warn other vehicles if sudden hard braking is required and brake lights are not bright enough to be seen by other drivers. Vehicle-to-Infrastructure (V2I) communication can aid in the prevention of accidents [3]. The RSU can collect and process information from vehicles moving within its transmission range; based on the analyzed data, if an accident is about to occur, the RSU broadcasts a warning message to vehicles within its transmission range so they
